An old fox was walking in the woods. He heard a lot of noise. "What's that terrible noise?" said the old fox. He saw a wild boar rubbing his tusks against a tree trunk. "What are you doing?" asked the fox.

"I am sharpening my tusks," answered the wild boar.

"Why are you doing that now?" the fox asked. "You are safe here."

"Silly old fox," the boar said. "I must make my tusks sharp now. If I wait until there is danger, there will not be time." And he began to rub his tusks again.
